St. Martin's Church is an ancient Saxon foundation which stands at the side of the northern entrance to the town of Wareham, and shows obvious signs of the centuries which have passed over its head. It is no longer used for purposes of worship, but is worthy of a visit from the tourist on account of its architectural and antiquarian interest. St. Martin's, St. Mary's and Trinity Church are the only three buildings remaining of the famous eight churches of which Wareham once boasted.
